So much information is available on the internet it can make you head swim. But the nuggets are there and even though there is a lot of garbage it can be worth the search, making sure you use your Bible as your source of final truth. When miners go for the gold they have to remove a lot of trash first.

To anyone with half a mind to research if the Name of our Savior has been changed or not, and replaced in the translations we have today, the reward is in uncovering this truth and seeing how the Holy Bible is revitalized by this discovery can be enormous. Once you know this to be true then you will be confronted with those within the, so called, Sacred Names Movement, presenting His Name in different forms – which of these is right. Now that you have come to this knowledge of deception and you want to correct the error and begin using our Savior's birth name, it suddenly seems to become so confusing? But, wait, it does not have to be, not at all. I have debated this issue with those supporting this version or that, of His Name in Hebrew, Aramaic, Jewish, Orthodox Jewish, Christians, and Sacred Names peoples and articles on this subject and the one constant, the one common denominator is the Name as YaHshua, our savior revealed it and as it is found throughout the Scriptures, but for some reason, the argument and arguments all seem to turn on the middle or the last part of The Name. The fact is, the last part, and parts of The Name (The Shem) is the definition, or the explanation, if you will, of what the Name is about, or about to do – not the Name itself but the “authority” of the power behind the Name. Let’s start with the common element, the common denominator, upon which nearly all with the understanding that the name JESUS is false, use and understand – sort of.

Common Denominator

There is a common thread and this common thread, which is not so common, is the name YaH (YH). All too often this Name has been referred to as the “short form” of the Tetragrammaton (Four letters of the Name of God of the Hebrew Scriptures – from the Greek and late Latin – tetragrammatos). When we see this is not a short form, but The Name of the God of all creation, the Sustainer of all things and the Salvation of mankind – our Savior – then things begin to fall into place and the “Word” is able to speak to us more clearly.

Some will go off the deep end when hearing this. I ask that you consider it, that you think about it, that you pray about it. Our Creator, or Heavenly Father and our Savior intended we use Their Name in a personal and intimate way. Not as some power source, or some magical formula but in as the Name of our personal friend and Savior, the identity of our only hope. He tells us He will not give His Name to another (Isa 42:8, Ex 23:13, John 5:43), but this is what has happened, among men – His Name has been covered, hidden and the name of our Savior, changed, causing many to accept “another name”. Our Creator and Savior’s Name declares who they are, and what they can and do accomplish. The first part of the Name or the God of Abraham and Isaac is indefinable, referring only to the person of the One and Only God. The last part identifies who He is, and what He can do, or will do.

If you can accept this you will see how everyone is arguing over what our Creator and Savior can or will do. YaH Shua, which is to say, YaH Savior, or YaH Salvation and from this we know our Savior is YaH, or, YaHshua. Some argue the more correct is, YaHushua, even YaHoshua. YaH u Shua, is to say, YaH is my Savior, or, YaH is Salvation. Do you begin to see what is happening? Next you have the same thing happening with the Name of the God of the Hebrews, YHWH – YaHWeH. Remember, the “a” and the “e” is not part of the Name, but are vowels replacing the vowel points used to aid the reader in pronouncing His Name. So, when you see people arguing over these vowels as part of the Name you can ignore them as it just is not so. Again, remember, His Name, YaH (YH) is not definable, it is the Name of the One God and He wants us to call Him Father, He wants a personal and intimate relationship with us. When you go through the Hebrew Scriptures in Hebrew or English you will see over and over again His Name declared, and declaring His attributes. Just as YaHshua or YaHoshua declares our Savior and our Salvation, something only He can do. Who do you suppose raised our Savior back to life? And let us not forget, our Savior told us He came in His Father’s Name (John 5:43) – if He came in His Father’s Name He most certainly came in the power and “authority” of His Father too. Some try to argue this verse did not really mean He, YaH Shua, came, literally, in His Name, which is very odd and makes sense to the world in rejecting His Name and denies the plain interpretation of this verse.

Once we establish the consistency of His Name and this Name associated with descriptive clauses we begin to see the correct pattern and abuses His Name Has suffered at the hands of the experts. Go to the article “Shouting His Name”, and you will see example after example of His Holy Name being used over and over in descriptive declarations.

This brings us to the often argued Arabic name, Yeshua. I say Arabic as that is what it is, everyone says it is Aramaic but the language of the Arab people, one of the Semitic languages but not Hebrew, nor Jewish, nor the same language spoken by our Savior and the Apostles of the first century. You will notice right off, the name is not in this “name”. When you go to the Hebrew for this term you find it means “salvation”. Look up the word for “salvation” and you will see this is true. Those pushing the term “Yeshua” as our Savior’s name are actually trying to turn a declaration term into a name. Read Isaiah (Isa YaH) 52:10, “...all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation (yeshua) of our God”, and Isaiah 12:2 “...behold God is my salvation (yeshua)”.

Strong’s Hebrew Dictionary, H3444

yesh-oo'-aw

Feminine passive participle of H3467; something saved, that is, (abstractly) deliverance; hence aid, victory, prosperity: - deliverance, health, help (-ing), salvation, save, saving (health), welfare.

This is the term they want you to use as a name. This is the same reasoning those say “Lord” is His Name, or “God” is His name. These are terms that demand you answer the question, “Which God is your God, which Lord is your Lord”? In the case of the term “salvation” this does not work so good, “salvation” is from someone, or “yeshua” is from someone, it is not someone. YaHshua is to say, YaH is my yeshua, but we are more comfortable saying, YaH is my Salvation. Not to belabor the point, but all the same, YaHshuameans, YaH is Salvation, but yeshua means only salvation. You could write, YaH is “yeshua” and be correct because that is what He is.

In the following article you will see examples of this faulty reasoning based on a faulty premise, that Yeshua is the correct name and all others are wrong. This author of what follows is actually attempting to show that the Aramaic inherited from the time of Mohammad is in error, and the complete article (I will post later) goes on in an attempt to prove that the bogus name JESUS is actually correct, as a result of the evolution of languages. For now I want to present this material as a visual. The flip side of the coin, you might say, and a very detailed coin it is, but I would like for you to notice, in every example given by the article below, it is just as I have said; the complete Name in the Hebrew contain His Name YaH (YH) while the Arab Aramaic does not. That is the argument for using “Yeshua” that it is the Aramaic of our Savior’s Name and this is the language the Apostles spoke. We find in Acts 21:40 Paul address his people in Hebrew and in Acts 26:14 our Savior addressed Paul in the Hebrew tongue – what happened to the Aramaic? Also the Aramaic of then is not the Arabic Aramaic of now. YaHshua identified Himself to Paul as YaHshua, or perhaps, YaHoshua, but not as “yeshua”. I hope you find what follows interesting and informative.

The accurate spelling and pronunciation of several Hebrew names:

יהושע A name spelled y-h-w-š-ʿ and pronounced yēhōšūʿ (or yēhōšūāʿ with the later Tiberian furtivum vowel), and usually rendered into English as “Joshua”.

ישוע A name spelled y-š-w-ʿ and pronounced yēšūʿ (Tiberian yēšūāʿ). This post-500-B.C. shortened version of y-h-w-š-ʿ is usually written in English as “Jesus” (or as “Jeshua” in Protestant translations of the Old Testament into English).

The absence of a letter waw װ in the usual spelling of the last syllable of yēhōšūʿ, in contrast to the presence of a waw װ in the usual spelling of the last syllable of yēšūʿ, does not reflect any difference in pronunciation between the last syllables of these two words, but rather the fact that yēhōšūʿ dates from an earlier historical period, when semivowel consonant letters were used to write long vowels in a narrower range of circumstances.

עשו A name spelled ʿ-ś-w and pronounced ʿēsāw, written in English as “Esau”. Most scholars reject the idea that Hebrew ʿēsāw is the source of the Qur’anic Arabic name of Jesus ʿīsā – but if influence from ʿēsāw is denied, then no good linguistic explanation remains for the position of pharyngeal ʿ at the beginning of ʿīsā.

יהוה The divine name or Tetragrammaton spelled y-h-w-h. The pronunciation of this word is not known with certainty, but yēhōwā (“Jehovah”) never existed in Hebrew, and originated from mistakes made by early Christian Hebraists. Modern scholars speculate about a reconstruction yahwé (“Yahweh”).

יהושׁה The occultistic “Pentagrammaton” y-h-š-w-h. The notion that the result of sticking a š sound or letter w into the middle of the Tetragrammaton is somehow equivalent to the Hebrew name of Jesus was another bright idea invented by early Christian Hebraists with an unsound knowledge of Hebrew. This jumble of letters has no meaning in Hebrew, and so no ascertainable genuine Hebrew-language pronunciation. Obviously, ישוע ≠ יהושׁה and יהושע ≠ יהושׁה!

This example above is not my study. I found it really interesting and I hope you do too. You can visualize the Hebrew lettering, reading from right to left; you see the Y and the H in the Hebrew characters plainly. Keep in mind the letters “e” and “a” are vowels to aid in the pronunciation and are not part of the Name (The Shem). In the example above the author uses the “e” vowel and what most do not realize is this “e” is a “long e”, or “ee” in pronunciation (phonetically) is nearly identical to the same phonetic sound as the “a”. Technically, those using the “e” should present it as “ee”, called the "long e", but that looks too weird so they let the reader think it is the “short e”, or they just do not know.

Okay, the “e” out of the way (joking) the article is dealing with how His Name is used in Aramaic and how they screw it up. Armed with your thinking cap and guided by the Spirit I do pray you can see this clearly – the arguments among the Sacred Names groups and some Hebrew/Jewish groups is not really over His Name, that seems to be hidden from them in plain sight, but they argue over letters not even found in His Name and over letters added and in one outstanding case, a letter of His Name removed, as in the name, Y’shua, or Yeshua, or Yeshu.

As more and more Christians wake up to this truth and begin to look for His birth Name we see the popularity of His Name written as, Yeshua coming into vogue. Many times the believer will hear a teacher, preacher or prophet using both the name, JESUS and Yeshua interchangeably. While this is so much better and is moving you and others toward the truth the replacing of the bogus name JESUS completely is still a problem for the truth seeker and the name Yeshua falls short too (pun intended). Some say this form, Yeshua, is the short form – not!

Yeshua is only part of the name -- a major letter has been dropped, effectively cutting the Name of our Creator God in half. In the title of this article you will notice the two primary Names for the God of the Old Testament and the God of the New Testament both contain the transliteration from the Hebrew letter to the English, “H”, while the Judaized and Christianized, Yeshua, or Y’shua, have dropped the “H” completely. I have read nearly every argument there is about why we should be using the name, Yeshua, instead of YaHshua and always come away with a bad taste, longing for the day we will be given a pure language putting an end all of this nonsense (Zep 3:9). Oh, and then there are those that claim YaHshua should be spelled, YaHushua.

Strong’s Hebrew Dictionary and Baker’s Complete Word Study -- when looking up the Old English transliteration, Joshua -- has it, Yahoshua. It seems the “o” and the “u” are to be pronounced the same? They say you cannot find the name, YaHshua, in the OT so we should use, Yeshua. The problem with this is there is not “o” and there is no “u” in the Name. Look at the examples in the above presentation, you will find not letter or character for the “u” or the “o” these are supplied by the translator, whomever that may be, or the reader, whomever that may be. It would be a matter of choice, and not part of His Name.

Clearly, the Aramaic (Arabic) has dropped the “H” character as has the Jewish version of this same, shortened, name. Yeshua is not correct. If you want a short version then go with, Yehu, or YaHu, as seen in some personal names such as Netanyahu, the current Prime Minister of Israel.

YaH is not a short form, however, but YaHu could easily be the short form of YaHushua, or YaHshua. I pray this has helped you, I know it has me.
